

HSUS: End Dogfighting™ Success Stories

January 1, 2012

Washington, D.C. (rushPRnews) 01/01/12 — Elmo was about to be sent into the horrific world of dogfighting. His master, then 11-year old Terrance, had seen it before and didn't understand that it was wrong. It was just what you did with your dogs.

But Elmo and Terrance are no longer on a path to dogfighting. In fact, they are now prime examples of how The Humane Society of the United States is ending dogfighting, one dog owner at a time.

Star students at dog training school

"When I first got Elmo, I was thinking about dogfighting," says Terrance, now 13. "Then I ran into a man with a dog and a dog training school." The man was from HSUS' End Dogfighting program. He changed Terrance's attitudes and behavior, and helped prevent Elmo from becoming a tragic victim.

Terrance continues. "I taught Elmo how to sit and stay and be a well behaved dog. Instead of teaching him the wrong thing, going out there and killing another dog, I'm teaching him the right thing, and encouraging him to be a good dog. He doesn't mistreat me, and I don't mistreat him." The young dog trainer and responsible dog owner concludes, "Be great with your dog, and no dogfighting!"
