

Karacha Highlights Benefits of Music on Young Children

September 17, 2009

LONDON, UK (RPRN) 09/17/09 — Young children can reap the rewards of learning to play music according to Karacha.com, the online destination for quality musical instruments and accessories. Karacha.com, which provides a range musical instruments to young children, including bright pink and blue violins has revealed musical instruments are fundamental to a child's development.

Karacha.com which also produces other fabulous, fun and affordable instruments including a coloured saxophone in bright red, gold and silver, also announced colourful instruments are a great way of engaging children with music. Bright colours encourage children to choose an instrument and develop a new hobby that would not normally be of interest to them and music is not only essential to improve a child's reading age, but also increases levels of concentration and brain development.

Adam Ewart, Managing Director of Karacha.com said: "We produce a variety of musical instruments for children of all ages, in a wide variety of colours and of a high quality. This is a winning combination for our customers which are parents - knowing that their children are learning to play music through the use of a high quality instrument, whilst also being a hit with the children themselves who enjoy the choice of bright and fun colours."

The online store which offers a bestselling clarinet also provides visitors with a variety of services such as video instrument demonstrations, music lessons and advice. Karacha.com has recently undergone a site relaunch now allowing customers to shop for musical instruments and accessories 365 days a year, 24 hours a day.

Karacha also stocks a variety of colourful and engaging percussion packs including maracas, bongos, castanets and guiros to ensure even very young children can get involved with music.
