Over the past five years, Plastic Mobile has gone beyond borders to find the best talent, establishing its expertise in mobile technology and user experience and becoming a leader in mobile innovation.

President and COO of Plastic Mobile, Melody Adhami said, "Ontario is an incredible place to start and build a business that could become a global enterprise, the opportunities are immense. Plastic Mobile has been growing at such a rapid pace and we will continue to as we push the boundaries of possible with mobile and touch technology."

Minister Coteau showcased Plastic Mobile as a prime example for a new legislation that he recently announced at Queen's Park saying, "I think this is a great success story and these are the types of businesses that we need in Ontario to continue to add to our robust economy."

Following the press conference, Minister Coteau had the opportunity to tour the Plastic Mobile Innovation Lab where he got to play around with some cutting-edge beta technology, from wearables to commerce-enabled BLE devices.

As a leading employer, Plastic Mobile will continue to help build the economy in the province of Ontario while paving the way for mobile innovation.
