Which Caravan and Camping Magazine recognized the genius behind the simple space saving product that can transform items like clothing, blankets, pillows, sleeping bags and more, into a flat, sealed package for easy transport and storage.

Popular television reporters on Australia's hit shows Better Homes and Garden plus Extra, extolled the virtues of the storage wonder product that can turn an ordinary garbage bag into a secure, air-tight space-saving container simply by attaching a vacuum hose and remove the air right out of the bag. Extra went to storage specialists at IKEA and were treated to first-hand demonstrations of how the BagButton can work with almost any bag in just minutes.

Since the BagButton is reusable and you will only need one, budget-conscious shoppers are finding enormous value in the reusable gadget. Campers, homeowners, travelers and anyone who wants to ensure safekeeping for their storage items is thrilled with the BagButton. Family-owned BagButton founders say they are looking forward to continued growth in 2010 with the unveiling of a new product.

"This is a very exciting year for BagButton," says BagButton president Larry Storey. "We're hopeful that by adding a new product this year we will enhance the sales of the BagButton."

BagButton is the global leader in economical vacuum storage solutions. Manufactured in the United States, BagButton has international distribution lines set up that are enormously successful. BagButton's economical technology enables users to convert almost any plastic bag into a vacuum compression storage unit for the price of a garbage bag.

BagButton entered the marketplace in February 2004 and has seen steady growth through 2009. BagButton founders formed the company with the objective of becoming the major economical participant in the space saving industry, targeting all retail outlets and the massive market that exists for space saving technology. With its worldwide acceptance, the "made in America" product has established a solid relationship with distributors and continues to operate with a strong work ethic and pride in new and innovative products at competitive prices. BagButton remains successful by focusing on their core products. Financial results have consistently been well above the projected expectations. BagButton is available online at www.bagbutton.com. A live video demonstration of the BagButton also is available at this site. Representatives welcome requests for distribution.
