January 12, 2012

Just in time for our 4th birthday, Martin LeFevour, patent litigator, has joined us. employer-employee disputes involving ownership of rights to intellectual property.

Chicago, IL (RPRN) 01/12/12 — Valorem Law Group is pleased to announce that Martin LeFevour, a veteran patent litigation attorney, has joined the firm. LeFevour has represented entrepreneurs, small businesses and large corporations in patent, trademark and copyright infringement matters, unfair competition and unfair trade issues, trade secret issues and Nicole Auerbach, one of Valorem's founding partners, stated that "the patent area is a major area of litigation and one in which many of our clients have expressed interest in applying Valorem's practices and pricing methods. We are pleased to be able to respond to these inquiries and requests."

Valorem Law Group is a Chicago-based business litigation firm that is comprised of skilled, courtroom BigLaw refugees who consider themselves revolutionaries, risk-takers and entrepreneurs at their core. Before coming to Valorem, LeFevour was a patent litigator at a large law firm and assisted companies, in various, wide-ranging fields including the optical touch, electronic trading and medical device area with intellectual property matters, patent litigation, patent prosecution and transactional matters, as well as company acquisitions and related due diligence.

LeFevour explains it was time to join a firm that aligns its goals and costs with the goals of the client. “In the complex, high-stakes and too often high cost realm of patent litigation, aligning these goals can have a great impact on providing better results and greater value in the ever-increasing fee environment associated with patent litigation,” adds LeFevour.
